

My Vision

To achieve any goal, you need to have a vision of that goal. The purpose of a personal vision statement is to define your goal and use it as a constant reminder to keep you on track.

In this exercise, write your own personal vision statement of where you want to be in the future. The statement can be as long or as short as you need it to be but keep it specific to your end goal. Make it personal, make it positive and make it very powerful.

Below are two examples of vision statements to guide you in the writing of your own. The first is the Isagenix corporate vision and the second is a personal vision statement that many Isagenix associates use.

Isagenix International Vision:

To impact world health and free people from physical and financial pain, and in the process create the largest health-and-wellness company in the world.

Isagenix Associate Personal Vision:

“I _____, choose to impact world health and free people everywhere from pain, both physically and financially! I choose to help create the largest Health and Wellness Company in the world, and as a result I choose to become financially free in the process of helping others do the same.

I love being the change I want to see in the world. I focus on what I want, and I share what I’m excited about. I am grateful for each and every life experience, and recognize that each experience has perfectly prepared me to seize this singular opportunity called Isagenix. My mentors and leaders WANT me to be successful and go to the top. My family and my team NEED me to be successful and go to the top!

So, I _____, choose to get into massive action right now! I enthusiastically share this life changing message with _____ new friends or more each day, and I always ask for referrals.
